Conference Overview/ Theme

As we consider the challenges facing the Asia Pacific region—including aging populations, rising environmental concerns, and talent shortages—we are forced to marvel at the resilience and continuous reinvention that occurs in this region. Join distinguished speakers and management education leaders from across the Asia Pacific region to consider how current challenges can be converted into innovations and how business schools are leading this change.

Who Should Attend?

Deans, associate deans, department chairs, and faculty at business schools in the Asia Pacific region, as well as professionals from business schools worldwide working or seeking to work with schools in the region.

Conference Chair

Yasutomi Kitahara
Dean and Professor, Nagoya University of Commerce and Business

Seminar Overview

To help instructors fine-tune their approach to case method teaching, Harvard Business Publishing offers a seminar on the art and craft of discussion leadership. Attendees experience the seminar both as instructor and student. First, as an instructor, by learning techniques for orchestrating classroom discussion, board management, discussion plan preparation, and more to consider when preparing to teach a case. Second, as a student, by preparing and discussing cases.

Who Should Attend?

This seminar will be hosted by NUCB Business School and is open to all teaching faculty at degree-granting institutions. This seminar is offered only to teaching faculty at degree-granting institutions. All sessions conducted in English, proficiency in all aspects a requirement.

Registration Detail

The academic registration fee is US $950. This includes program materials and meals while the seminar is in session.
